Duke University
Assistant Professor of Public Policy

The Sanford School of Public Policy at Duke University seeks applicants for a tenure-track assistant professorship with policy-relevant research and teaching interests in economics.

Candidates must have a Ph.D. in economics, public policy, or a related field. The successful candidate will have a strong interest in applied economics research and the desire to participate in a rich interdisciplinary environment with more than 60 faculty members. The Sanford School has a large undergraduate major in public policy, two master’s programs and a PhD. program.

In addition to offering policy-oriented courses in their specialty area, candidates should be prepared to teach one or more economics courses in the core curriculum at either the undergraduate or graduate level.

All candidates should submit a letter of application explaining their interest in a faculty position in a school of public policy, CV, writing sample, and three letters of reference to Professor Helen Ladd, Search Committee Chair, via the following website: https://academicjobsonline.org/ajo/jobs/3439. Applications received by December 1, 2013 will be guaranteed full consideration.

Duke University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Under-represented racial/ethnic minorities and women are especially encouraged to apply.
