Two Year Postdoctoral Fellowship in Education Policy and Methods. The University of Pennsylvania, Graduate School of Education is hiring a postdoctoral fellow for a 12 month position. Start date is between May and September 2014. The fellowship, which allows 50% of time to be spent on the fellow’s independent research, includes a salary of $50,000 per year, plus health insurance, and generous funding for conference travel, professional development, and computers/software. The fellowship is designed to foster fellows as independent scholars. Emphasis is on refining and/or supplementing the fellow’s methods, analysis, fieldwork, and/or design expertise in education impact research, providing opportunities for scholarly publication. No teaching is required for this position. Fellows will have access to faculty mentors. Approximately half of the fellow’s time will be spent on their own independent research, and half on collaborative research projects. We encourage applicants from a wide array of social science disciplines. Applications will be accepted starting November 1st and considered on a rolling basis. For more details and how to apply. Contact Professor Laura Desimone, lauramd@gse.upenn.edu with questions.